Brief biography, including any relevant experiences relevant to the role that you are interested in:

I am Deputy Head of School for Health and Social Care - Sheffield Hallam University, where I provide strategic leadership across a diverse, multidisciplinary environment. My current portfolio includes oversight of Allied Health Professions and Learning & Teaching, with a strong emphasis on curriculum innovation, academic strategy, and fostering inclusive, evidence-based education.

Alongside this role, I am undertaking doctoral research exploring the psychosocial dynamics of diagnostic imaging desire in low back pain, aiming to enhance shared decision-making and strengthen patient-centred musculoskeletal care.

My career spans clinical, academic, and leadership roles. I began as a Physiotherapist in the NHS and developed to undertake MSc and MACP membership to work as an Advanced Clinical Practitioner before moving into higher education where I progressed from Senior Lecturer/Researcher to Physiotherapy Portfolio Lead and Teaching & Learning Portfolio Lead for the AHP department. Over this time, I have built a sustained record of advancing musculoskeletal education and supporting the development of future physiotherapists through high-quality teaching, mentorship, and research.

I have served on the MACP Education Committee for many years, which has given me valuable insight into its remit, direction of travel, and the importance of collaboration across the profession. I am committed to building on this excellent work, supporting the continuing development of the organisation, and ensuring it remains at the forefront of musculoskeletal practice, education, and research.
